Mixing the Dough The Most Important Stage in Producing a Perfect Loaf of Bread.

In this white-walled mixing-room the ingredients are carefully measured and weighed. The flour is made of the best northern spring wheat. The milk is pure as is the spring water. The best yeast together with salt, sugar and lard. These are assembled, weighed, and put in the large mixing machine. This machine does its work infinitely better than it can be done by hand, and much more sanitary. The result is a mass of pure white dough. During all this process, the temperature is kept at the right degree.

The PROOF of the BREAD is in the eating; WE REQUEST the VERDICT of YOUR TASTE

Dividing and Moulding Machine

When the dough has had the proper time for fermentation, it is dropped into a chute and delivered untouched by hands into the Dividing Machine. This takes the dough in a mass and cuts it in pieces the right weight for loaves of bread. These loaves are dropped on a moving belt, which carries them to the rounding-up machine. From this machine it is put in drawers to rest from the effect of the pressure of the Dividing and Rounding Machines. Then it goes to the Moulder, where it is shaped for, and put in the pans. The pans are put on racks and these are wheeled into the white-walled steam room to rise, and from here to (See next issue of this paper.)
